

Occupational health physicians

A key element of an effective workplace health programme will include professional medical expertise.

Our highly qualified and experienced team of occupational health physicians provide a wide range of medical services to help employers manage their workforce's health responsibly.

These services include statutory medical surveillance, specialised referrals, rehabilitation management, and health assessments for work capability, return to work and retirement on ill health grounds.

They also carry out a range of medical assessments for drivers, long term sickness and frequent sickness absence, and pension fund related services.
